

Did you know that some men believe that women should not have the right to vote? In the early 1800's women started to fight for the right to vote. Today, the Congress passed the 19th amendment, but some people (men) still don't want women to be able to vote. I believe that women should have the right to vote. We women should have the right to vote because it is fair and right, laws unjust to women would be amended more quickly, and lastly, men and women are created equal. These are some of the many reasons why women should be able to vote.

In fact, women should have the right to vote because it is fair and right. Why you ask? Well, those who must obey the laws should have a voice in making them. This means that it isn't fair that women have to obey the rules while having no say in making them. Also those who pay taxes, should be able to vote for the size of the tax and how it will be spent. This means that women who pay taxes should at least have a say in the size of the tax and how it shall it be spent. This is one of the reasons why women should be allowed to vote.

Furthermore, women should be able to vote because if laws are unjust to women, it could be amended more quickly. For example, a woman would think that a law is unjust while a man does not. If a woman had a say in the law, then the law could be amended more quickly than if a woman did not have a say in the law. But, all of that has changed now due to all of the female (and few male) activists.

On the other hand, some people may think that if women get the right to vote, it would mean competition (with men) instead of cooperation. However, they fail to realize that many men are too lazy and do not want a challenge, so this means that the majority of men will still cooperate with that women who vote. Also, some men are loyal to their wives and the idea that women should vote so they will cooperate as well. This is why the people who think that women getting to vote would mean competition with men are wrong.

Most convincingly, I, Sarah Williams, believe that men and women are created equally. I believe that men and women are created equally because in the Declaration of Sentiments document that "men and women are created equal". It also says that "they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights". This all basically means that the people (mostly women but very few men) who wrote this document believes that men and women are created equally, and that women should have the right to vote. The Declaration of Sentiments document was modeled after the Declaration of Independence.

To conclude, I think that women should have the right to vote. The reasons why women should have the right to vote are the following; it's fair and right, laws unjust to women would be amended more quickly, and men and women are created equal. Many people think that if women get the right to vote, that it will cause competition with men instead of cooperation. However they are wrong because many men are too lazy and do not want a challenge, therefore, they will still cooperate with the women who vote. Also, some men are loyal to their wives and the idea that women should vote, so they too will be able to cooperate with the women who vote. This is why I, Sarah Williams, believe that woman should have the right to vote.
